JUDGMENT

The petitioner was an employee of the first respondent. Dispute between him and the first respondent was referred for adjudication to the Industrial Tribunal. The Tribunal passed an order of reinstatement with backwages. The petitioner seeks the issuance of writ of mandamus to the first respondent, a co-operative society to comply with that order. No writ is needed to be issued under such circumstances. All the more so, because, the Industrial Disputes Act provides sufficient remedies in case of an employer failing to obey an award passed by an Industrial Tribunal. The writ petition is dismissed in limine.

THOTTATHIL B. RADHAKRISHNAN,
JUDGE.
